It's getting difficult to fall asleep, someone is in my mind 24/7 rent free. I don't mind actually, just have to thinking about something else when I sleep, which I know how to do. If I really can't, then I'll just make some coffee and start doing my assignments or write. I still get around 6 to 8 hours of sleep everyday tho so that's good.

I'm not a sexist, but based on social norms, if I were a woman and the guy I loved is proposing or giving me something important, rings, bracelet, necklace, etc. I will just ignore the item completely and grab their wrist, pull them towards me and give them a big hug. They already know I'm going to say yes anyways. And, I think small items are only important if I'm missing someone and can't reach them. If they are right next to me, I really really really don't give shits to everything else.
