Sometimes I don't know what to write because I really prefer talk to you in-person instead of writing everything here.

I don't know what I will do after I graduate tbh, I already finished all Physics, Astronomy, and Math major requirements (yes I know I said I hate math but it is required to understand physics :cryemoji:), just taking harder classes next semester to prepare for grad school.

It's getting insanely difficult to get into grads due to stupid funding cuts. Well worst case scenario I can always do a master then become a high school teacher. idk, I want to teach, ~~I like making ppl shed tears of joy~~, I like helping those who want to learn. That means I won't be learning much tho so again worst case scenario.

I think love is about learning too, it should be a mutual feeling between two who respect, support, and learn from each other.

And how much I love someone... only time could tell.
