First week of school didnt even end and bruh is already dropping hydrogen bomb like it's made up of water. In a good mood today yes i said it im in a good mood today, maybe because at least i learned something. Where im heading to is actually the last thing i care about, if, if i get into a phd, im getting paid and i should be able to make my own schedule and do things at my own pace, i mean ofc ill be busy with things like teaching assistant or some mandatory classes, but as long as i get my work done on time im basically free. The only master on my list is sbu, i dont want to do a master at any other school, way too expensive and not worth it imo.

What ive always wanted, isnt money, recognition, sex, knowledge, or love, well since ppl have their own definition of love nowadays, what i wanted is two genuinely care about each other in this fucked up world, and defy everything that stands against it.

there was a lunar eclipse last night btw.
