ppl gotta be careful with the books they pick up at the library. There are so many ahhh books these days. bruh now I get why some old russian books are still considered the best. Three books by different authors. I only finished the first 20 pages of each because I ain't reading the rest if they can't keep me interested. All fiction too, because non-fiction sucks cough cough. The first one has a protagonist who's pregnant at 22 and doesn't even know who the father is. The second one keeps talking about bitcoin, like brother, I'd rather watch a documentary about bitcoin than read this book. The last one starts with a couple ending their relationship because of long distance. The book was published in December 2025, so I mean, like, we're living in the 21st century, facetime and the internet exist??? Nowadays, the real reason people end relationships is and only is because they don't love each other anymore.
