I think i will write a bit more today and might be sensitive but I still want to write it. After watching obsession, i will not make any wishes in the future, so no more I wish. I don't want to spoil anything but it reminds me of eternal sunshine of the spotless mind for some reason, but yeah eternal sunshine is just better. I think it's now free on youtube, highly recommend. I really like the ending and the lake scene, well not naming the stars part, I love sky when it is random. I mean I probably should remember some for an easier observation session, but sky guide on appstore is free. Love the ending too, it is a very old movie so ig i can spoil a little bit just the ending, what would people do if they knew today that they would eventually grow bored of and tired of their loved one? I think most ppl wouldn't change their mind now and would try to find a way to prevent it from happening. And i do believe this is the best choice if they really love each other. But again, I think that's very very very common in today's society, like couple grew bored or just one of them, the divorce rate speaks for itself, that's not even counting in the married but separated. I feel like ppl are just not taking their relationships seriously, like most ppl are in just for sex or emotional supports, they are not ready to love one person for the rest of their life. I mean i kinda get it, ppl changes and '8.3 billion ppl, why should I love only one person' (if someone actually say that or similar shit in front of me, I will imagine myself kicking their balls or ass). Do I think joel and clementine love each other? yes, no doubt. But they still argued and had a fight, then something even worse happened (no spoil), but they still ended up what(no spoil), thats why I think they do love each other. On the contrast, if two didn't get back together after a fight, then I really dont think the love is mutual.

Now back to obsession, I feel like everything is so fucked up I dont even want to talk about it, still a good movie but everything is just fucked up, especially the car. Like you CANT do that to a car.

Me? a new playlist? I actually dont know what songs to add, I've only been listening to night dancer and rain dropping sounds for the past couple of months... something lasted for only 3 months is still occupying my mind after 3 years, actually, 3.5 years. The only New Year's Eve I still remember is the one from 2023.
